Baird is Resting Easily—Ernest A. Baird, the Capitol policeman who was seriously injured by being struck by a cable train near Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest Saturday night, was said to be resting easily at the Emergency Hospital at a late hour last night. It has been found that no bones were broken, but Mr. Baird's spine and lungs were seriously injured and his condition is still regarded as critical.

"CRAP CASTLE" RAIDED.

Third Precinct Police Capture the King Bee and Eight Dusky Players. A few minutes after 12 o'clock yesterday norning Policemen McNeely, Hanley, Parham, and O'Brien, of the Third precinct, swooped down on the place of Eandolph Richardson, colored, corner of Twenty-sixth and E streets northwest, and found an over-grown, after midnight game of crap in full grown, after midnight game of crap in Inil blast.

The house is known among the colored denizen's of Washington's Whitechapel district as "Crap Castle." When the bluecouts rushed if they found the place crowded with players, while the merry song of "sebben, eleblen" filled the air. The police succeeded in capturing the proprietor and eight players and they were locked up at station No. 2.

The keeper of the "Castle," Randolph Richardson, is charged with maintaining a gaming table. The others have the charge of disorderly conduct opposite their names. They are Samuel Jennings, Walter Johnson, James White, Alf Smallwood, Chester Harris, Wilfiam Mills, James Brown, and William Stephenson.

SPRING BRIDES' GOWNS

This to Wear at the Wedding-That in the Honeymoon.

The Material Which Is Spoken of as "Standing Alone" Is Still the Strong Favorite-Brown Is a ferviceable and Usually an Adaptable Color-Wraps for Southern Climes Must Be Light in Weight.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.-She makes a good beginning in matrimony who can go to the altar well and becomingly dressed; and since this is one of the periods when the young man's fancy of the foregoing springtime is yearly made into something more solid, a little talk on wedding clothes does not seem

To begin, there is the marriage frock itself, of course, and in all the history of fashion never were marriage frocks more charming

THE OPERA CLOAK, Ail who are sufficiently youthful choose white as the bride material, and satin, that ladies of the old school still speak of as "standing alone," is pre-eminently the favorite, Along with it, however, will be seen effecttre gowns in less expensive stuffs—white granadine, plain gros-grain, and the thin, crinkley erepon that drapes so beautifully. Chiffon over sikk is also used, and white satin and Brussels net make a combination that nothing can excel in daintin

AN IMPORTED PROCK. A wedding dress of especial loveliness in these last two materials, and here illustrated, has just been imported for a February bride. The skirt in particular, though of a surpassing simplicity, is most bewildering.

First there is an entire demi-train,

First there is an entire demi-train, one of satin, over this a second one of the Brussels net of a heavy grade, made full, slightly gored at the waist, and finished at the bottom with a wide hem and three tucks.

The bodiese, which follows the correct bride model of high neck and long sleeves, is of the satin with a tag rest of net; the strap pieces through which this peeps are finished with a tiny satin underfold, the drooping leaves are of satin. A fold of satin and side choux outlines the waist.

Another bride gown that is even more novel and cleud-like than this, is a Felix fantaisie of tulie over satin, with a foot fringe and bodies decorations of orange blossoms. But here it seems wise to add that this last is a more freat; in altar frocks. It is just one of those traps sent out to catch the unwary. French women, the best dressing of all brides, rarely departing from the prescribed rules of slik or satin, the gown being made as simply slik or satin, the gown being made as simply as possible,

TOR PRENCH SRIDES. as a rule indeed the Parisian wedding dress is considered in best taste when severely plain, but when trimming is desired the bodice may have a bertha or some other decoration of rich lace.

The smartly stiffened satin skirt is either denil or full trained, and is rarely trimmed.

back and front, as always, but where this is liked it is sometimes bunchy over the ears, with little sprays of orange blossoms to widen the bead after the present fad. As to the gown in which to start off on the honeymooning, brown seems to have become, for color, almost as popular as the old-time for color, almost as popular dove gray.

Brown is more universally becoming to complexions than any other shade. It is, besides, best adapted for wear and tear, and when long journeys are in contemplation, this point is of vital importance.

FOR SOUTHERN SUNSHINE. The dashing going-away frock of a late New York bride, who is now on her way to spend the lune de mill in Florida, a favorite winter place for honeymeons, was of tobacco brown cloth over daffodil yellow silk. This formed the foundation of the French circular skirt, and showed through brown open-work

FOR THE TROUSSEAU. Another garment worthy of mention in the trousseau of this same young woman, who, by the way, had a dower of more wits and good looks than dollars, is a carriage wrap 1326 15th st nw. of cloth in a brown tan, with a bewildering petunia lining an I bands of silky broad-tail This splendid affair, a Worth creation, and here pictured, was what may be valgarly termed a "bargain." When it made its de-but in New York its price was just $200, far too big a one for the prespective bride, who, nevertheless, felt the wrap to be the one thing necessary to her happiness. It was just the weight suited to the mild Florida air she intended to seek, and, moreover, it was adorably becoming to her pale brunette type. So, like patience on a monument, she kept her eye on it; and when after the holidays, together with stocks or the thermometer, or what not, its price fell, she bought it for $60. So much for knowing how to wait. NINA FITCH.
